Employee Dependent Tuition Reduction Benefit

Description:

The Idaho State University (ISU) employee dependent tuition and general fee benefit provides for a 50 percent reduction of resident (in state) student tuition and general fees for dependents of eligible ISU employees. The reduction applies for either a part-time or full-time course load. The benefit is limited to 18 credits per semester or summer session. The reduction does not affect the ability of the dependent to a) fully participate in ASISU activities or b) utilize facilities on campus.

Benefit-eligible faculty and staff can continue to utilize the current employee/spouse fee waiver benefit for themselves and their spouses, even if the family is utilizing the dependent reduction that same semester or session.

The dependent reduction benefit is applicable for Idaho State University eligible employees and their eligible dependents enrolled at Idaho State University; the reduction does not apply to courses taken at other Idaho public universities.

The dependent fee reduction benefit is a year-to-year benefit that is evaluated each spring and is subject to revision and or termination by the University. The initial term began in the fall of 2013.

Employee Eligibility:

Benefit-eligible faculty and staff who are employed half-time or greater as of the first day of classes for a particular semester or session ("term") are eligible to utilize this benefit for one dependent that same semester or session. If both spouses are eligible employees, they are still limited to just one dependent for the family for a particular term. Other employee eligibility criteria include:

- Employees on leave without pay (except for approved medical leave) are not eligible for the benefit.
- If an eligible employee is called to active military service or goes on sabbatical, the benefit can still be utilized for a dependent while the employee is away from campus.
- If an eligible employee becomes permanently disabled or dies while employed at ISU, the benefit will continue for the dependent who was receiving the reduction.
- If an eligible employee voluntarily resigns or is terminated prior to the midpoint of the current term, the dependent will be charged the full amount of tuition and fees for the current term's courses in which the dependent is enrolled.
- The reduction benefit does not apply to course- and program-specific fees (e.g., course fees, lab fees, on-line course fees, professional fees, and other such additional fees).
- Tuition for study abroad is not eligible for the fee reduction.
- Employees of the Office of the State Board of Education and the Division of Professional-Technical Education shall be treated as ISU employees for purposes of eligibility.

Dependent Eligibility and Related Criteria:

An eligible dependent is defined as someone under the age of 26 and not married as of the first day of classes for the term for which the reduction is applied and who is claimed on a) the employee's or the spouse's health insurance policy or b) the employee's federal income tax return. If a dependent turns 26 or marries after the first day of a term, the benefit will no longer be available for subsequent terms, but will continue through the current term. Other dependent eligibility criteria include:

- Only one dependent per family (one or both parents are benefit eligible employees) may receive the benefit during a particular term.
- Eligible dependents must meet all admission requirements and be admitted to the University to be eligible. The dependent tuition and fee benefit does not guarantee admission to the University or to a specific program.
- The dependent must be a credential- or degree-seeking student.
- The benefit may be used for eligible students enrolled in professional-technical or academic undergraduate credit-bearing courses. The benefit does not apply to non-credit courses, audited courses, or continuing education courses.
- The dependent benefit is available until the dependent reaches one of the following three checkpoints:
 - completes an accredited bachelor's degree program,
 - attempts 140 credit hours, or
 - has been enrolled in college for 12 terms.
- Dependents enrolled in programs that combine undergraduate and graduate credits (e.g., joint B.S./M.S., etc.) are eligible for the reduction until either a) the student's record reflects his/her primary program is at the graduate level or b) the student completes 140 credit hours, whichever comes first.
- The tuition benefit will reduce the dependent's calculated cost of attendance for financial aid purposes. For dependents who have been awarded financial aid, this could result in a decrease in their aid. Students concerned about any reductions should contact the Financial Aid Office before submitting the tuition reduction form. Once the form has been submitted, Financial Aid will be notified and will adjust the dependent's financial aid package as appropriate.
- A student receiving 4 year Institutional Scholarships from Idaho State University may not be eligible for the reduction or may have this benefit reduced. A student is not able to receive more than the amount of full in-state tuition for a given semester when combining the Institutional and Employee Dependent benefit together.
- A dependent tuition reduction may be taxable income to the employee. The employee should consult a tax adviser on this issue. If the ISU payroll office determines the reduction could be taxable income, taxes will be deducted from the employee's paycheck.

Applying for the Employee Dependent Reduction:

Completed, signed applications must be brought to Human Resources by the registration deadline for the term for which the student is enrolling. The application form requires signatures of the employee and the employee's dependent as well as approvals of the offices of Human Resources, Accounts Receivable and Payroll. The benefit is not automatically renewed; a completed, signed application must be submitted for each term in accordance with these guidelines.
